And treat him rough?
Yes, go my son, with aim that's true
And shoot the man that says to you,

CLEAN MEN,
CLEAN RACE

The Open Barrel and Mud Slinging Not in Evidence in Campaign.

DECENT STRUGGLE FOR PIE

Candidates Will Know Who's Who in Eleven Days More.

The primary election is only eleven days off and candidates are doing some tall hustling. All of them, so far as we know, are confident of being nominated.

From Muhlenburg county, through the city press, comes the news that candidates seeking the nomination for office at the August primary have signed on agreement that money will not be spent to win.

So far as our information goes, it looks like Muhlenburg county has copied after Christian county. With about 70 candidates for county and city offices the men who want to serve the "dear people," if any of them have opened the proverbial barrel we have not heard about it. They are all doing a lot of personal electioneering, but they are doing it in a gentlemanly way, and have cut out the booze act and are not spending much money in their efforts to land the nomination for the office that may go to somebody else when the polls close in November.

A primary election is nothing more than a test of strength in the parties. The election is a test of parties. After the primary it is to be hoped that the selected champions of the parties will conduct their canvass on the high plane that has thus far characterized each of the men in the running.

But can it be done? It has been done. Vituperation, abuse and efforts to undermine good men's characters have got to be so cheap, and calling men to account so rare, that the best of our citizens never know how mean they are until they offer for office or are elected. The man who tries to reach an office via the mud-throwing route is not worthy the support of his best friends, to say nothing of others in his party.

The candidates for nomination are a clean set of men, and we are glad to note that not one of them has thus far been guilty of an ignoble act. Some of them have had a taste of office and others are trying to get to the pie counter for the first time, but making their canvass in a way that makes one almost want to vote for all of them. Whether they are out in the tall and uncut or button-holding at the street corners, they seem to be doing nothing reprehensible. After the primary, may the defeated gracefully submit to the fiat of the people, and may the successful not forget that they are men.

LADIES INJURED

When Empty Buggy Crashed Into Their Vehicle.

Mrs. Frank P. Stowe and sister, Miss Edith Williams, of Church Hill, were victims of an accident a few days ago, which came near proving quite serious. The two ladies were enroute from Church Hill to the home of the former, when a horse attached to a buggy ran into their vehicle. Mrs. Stowe's buggy was upset and both ladies were thrown to the ground, sustaining some very bad bruises about the face. Both vehicles were wrecked.

MONTH

Many Planning To Spend the Month of August Pleasantly.

GRAND TRIP ARRANGED.

Tour of the North and East Affords Every Opportunity Desired.

August, the vacation month, will soon be here and those who contemplate taking an outing are already making their plans to spend the time in comfort. The matter of selecting a trip most enjoyable always confronts the seeker of rest and recreation and the subject should be carefully studied with a view of making a selection acceptable in all respects. In making up an itinerary there are many things to be considered, such as satisfactory rates, limit of ticket, convenient stop-overs, scenic route, etc., but one of the most important of all matters is the question of who will personally conduct the party, in order that the trip may be one free from care and worry to the rest and comfort seeker. The great summer tour Aug. 7, conducted by Col. W. A. Wilgus, tourist agent, of this city, embodies all of the elements necessary for just such a trip and fills the bill in every particular. This trip includes Niagara Falls, Toronto, Lake Ontario, St. Lawrence River and Rapids, Thousand Islands, Montreal, Albany, Hudson River, New York City, voyage on the Atlantic ocean, Old Point Comfort, Potomac River, Washington City and Chesapeake and Ohio scenery from the ocean to Cincinnati, O. The trip lasts sixteen days and is strictly one of pleasure, rest and comfort. Present indications point to one of the largest crowds in the history of this delightful tour for this year, and many others who have not yet decided upon an outing will doubtless join the party before the day of departure.

IMPROVED SERVICE

Of Trains Between Hopkinsville and Princeton.

The traveling public will be pleased to learn that the improvement of the passenger service of the Illinois Central railroad between Hopkinsville and Princeton is being considered by F. W. Harlow, passenger agent of this division. Mr. Harlow was in the city last week looking into the affairs of the road and he may also improve the service between here and Dawson.

Persistence Rewarded.

D. C. Adams, of New Castle, backed by Senator James, has been appointed to the Second District cadetship to West Point by an exchange agreement with Congressman Stanley. The boy passed as an alternate, his principal failed and after he had gone to West Point his principal got a rehearing and was admitted, displacing Adams. The latter, a poor boy, had made great sacrifices to get in and Congressman Cantrill enlisted Senator James' help and finally kept him in. The department objected strenuously to a transfer from one district to another and the President himself took a hand before the irregularity was permitted.

PARCELS
POST RATES

Reduction in Rates and Increase of Weight Are Ordered.

THE FIRST AND SECOND ZONE

Alone Are Affected by the Proposed Changes for the Present.

Washington, July 21.—Plans for the extension, improvement and reduction in rates of the parcel post were announced by Postmaster-General Burleson. The changes, which are to become effective August 15, include an increase from eleven pounds to twenty pounds in the maximum weight of parcels, a material reduction in the postal rates in the first and second zones, and the abandonment of the parcel post map as a means of computing rates and the substitution for it of a rate chart individualized to every postoffice in the United States. The plans contemplate the purchase of a large number of automobiles to be used exclusively for the delivery of parcel post matter.

While for the present the maximum weight limit of twenty pounds and the reduction in rates will apply only to the first and second zones from any given postoffice—a distance of about 150 miles—the changes directed today constitute the first long step towards a universal extension of the system and a general reduction in the rates of postage on parcel matter.

COOL WAVE

Arrived Saturday, Bringing Great Relief.

Suffering humanity was greatly relieved by a drop in the temperature of 30 degrees Saturday afternoon. Friday's temperature was 106 degrees at 3:30 o'clock. Sunday was comfortable and Sunday night the mercury took a tumble, landing at about the 65 degree mark. At 8 o'clock yesterday morning the 70 degree mark was reached, but strong breezes prevailed.

Slightly Cooler This Week.

Washington, D. C., July 20.—No hot wave is looked for this week by the weather bureau.

"The present pressure distribution over the northern hemisphere," said the weekly bulletin today, "appears favorable for the prevalence of moderate, or at least, not unusually high temperatures over the greater portion of the country during the coming week. Over the south and southwest temperatures probably will be high at times, but not so high as during the week just ended."

"As to precipitation, prospects are not very favorable and generally fair weather may be expected over all sections except the South Atlantic and Gulf states, where occasional thunder showers are likely to occur."

Paralysis Causes Death.

Miss Elizabeth Bowles died Friday night at the home of Mr. L. E. Adwell, at the advanced age of 85 years. Death was caused by paralysis. The deceased is survived by one brother and a sister, Mrs. Victoria McRae, of Pembroke. Her funeral services were conducted by Rev. T. L. Hulise, of the Methodist church at Pembroke, and the interment took place in the family burying ground, near Pembroke, Sunday.

MINISTER
ENDORSES

Action Of the Mayor and Trustees Of Elks Lodge.

CERTAIN DANCES CONDEMNED

Wants People Not To Allow Them In Their Homes.

Rev. A. R. Kasey, pastor of the Methodist church, during his sermon last Sunday morning warmly endorsed the action of the Mayor and the Trustees of Elks Lodge in putting the ban on objectionable dances generally.

He denounced in most unqualified terms the sensual dances that have been introduced in recent years and pointed out the danger to young people who indulge in them as well as those who witness them. He referred to a recent declaration of the captain of a Paducah excursion boat that none of the dances which are being suppressed in many cities would be allowed on the steamer. He also spoke of the action of the authorities of the larger cities in their attempts to suppress the dances in the tenderloin districts, and if those dances are too unclean to be allowed in such places, how can decent, Christian people permit them in their homes? He called upon his people, with all the intenseness of his nature, to do everything in their power to prevent the dances from getting a hold upon the young people of Hopkinsville and to assist the authorities and others in their efforts to suppress them.

YOUNG DEMOCRAT

Receives Appointment In the Revenue Service.

James Breathitt, Jr., has been appointed deputy collector of internal revenue under Collector Josh T. Griffith, of Owensboro.

The announcement sent out to the press Saturday was not a surprise to the people of this city, as Mr. Breathitt's many friends here had endorsed his application and it was well understood that he would win out.

The new deputy collector is a Democrat and was one of the number of sons of Republicans who gave up the traditions of the Republican party at the last general election, and cast their maiden votes for the Democratic standard bearers. He was admitted to the local bar two years ago, entering into partnership in the practice of law with his father, Judge James Breathitt.

DESCENDED FROM GREAT MEN

Many Still Living Who Trace Their Ancestry to Famous Soldiers Who Followed Napoleon.

The marshal Alexander Berthier, born at Versailles, was named sovereign prince of Neuchatel and Va-lengin, on March 30, and October 31, 1806, then prince of Wagram, October 31, 1809, and finally hereditary ducal peer on April 14, 1818.
Alexander Berthier, duke and prince of Wagram, born at Paris in 1883, is yet a bachelor. He has two sisters, the princesses of Tour d'Auvergne Lauraguais, and the Princess Jacques de Broglie.

Marshal Macdonald, of Scotch origin, received the duchy of Tarentum with 80,000 francs income on December 9, 1809. Napoleon Macdonald, duke of Tarentum, married Madame Valentine Delegorgue, widow of a former prefect of police.
They were divorced in 1901. They had no children, but the duke of Tarentum has two sisters.

Marshal Charles Nicholas Oudinot
received the title of duke of Reggio
April 14, 1810. The present duke, Henri, thirty years old, is the only male of the family.

Marshal Andre Massena was made prince of Essling, January 31, 1810, and duke of Rivoli, April 24 of the same year. The present Andre Massena, prince of Essling, duke of Ri-voli, is twenty-two years old. He has two sisters.

Marshal Michael Ney was created duke of Elchingen in May, 1808, and prince of Moskowa March 25, 1813.
The eldest of the family, Napoleon Ney, bears the title of prince of Mos-kowa, and his brother Charles that of the duke of Elchingen.

Marshal Louis-Gabriel Suchet obtained the duchy of Albuera January 11, 1813. The third duke of Albuera, Raoul-Napoleon Suchet, husband of Mlle. de Cambaceres, has one son.

WORLD'S WAR STRENGTH.

The figures for the war strength of the principal nations of the old world and of the United States of America are as follows: Germany,
4,000,000; France, 2,200,000; Russia, 5,000,000; Austria-Hungary, 2-100,000; Italy, 525,000; Great Britain, 800,000; Japan, 2,000,000;
Spain, 500,000; Sweden, 338,000;
Norway, 140,000; United States,
7,000,000. These figures will serve to answer the question as to what would be likely to happen in the event of war between this country and a foreign nation. In the first place such war would necessarily be of a naval character, if it took place at all, for no foreign nation would be foolish enough to attempt an invasion of the territory of the United States—that is, of the United States proper.

PLENTY OF OCCUPATION.

"Why don't you buy an automobile?"
"I get sufficient excitement out of the management of my fountain pen."

"Cooks should always marry well."
"Why cooks especially."
"Because cooks know how to look after the dough."

NATURAL REASON.

"Why is your nose so sharp, Mr.
Enpeck?"
"I guess it's because it's kept to the grindstone."

PROPER WAY.

"How is he paid for the series of articles on the solar system?"
"I suppose, by space rates."

NEW FRIENDSHIP RENOVATES.

The new friendship renovates us much because it is likely to bring the newest of our lives to the front—perhaps the newness that we have not otherwise dared to show—as to bring us new ideas.

Our aims, our loves, ourselves will alter whether or no. There are many forced renewings. We renew ourselves by delightful associations and by growing up with our children.
But it is within the power of our will to renew ourselves almost daily in those "intangible and shy matters" of our inner life which make our outer lives sanest, sweetest, best.—

Humane French Burglars.

Humane burglars broke into the Little Doubt About It.

Married a month, a young man told the magistrate that his wife had done
the following things: Tied up the marriage-certificate, pawned the ring, torn up her wedding-dress, assaulted him. She followed him to court, he added, but he managed to dodge her.

STEEL SHOT TO CUT STONE

Does Better Work Than Either Sand or Emery, and Has Been Found to Be Far More Lasting.

It is popularly supposed that the sawing of stone into slabs or blocks is done by sand and water beneath some suitable tool. But sand and emery have been abandoned in favor of chilled steel shot. Steel shot is now made so hard that it cannot be bruised or crushed under the heaviest pressure, whereas sand or emery is soon reduced to an ineffective powder, Harper's Weekly states. A piece of work can be done thrice as fast with shot, so that the saving of time makes its use cheaper than to use sand. The wear on the tool is far less, also, and there is greater accuracy in the cut. A particle of sand is effective in sawing only when it im-beds itself in the blade, to stand there as a small, sharp tooth, which removes from the stone below it one grain at a time, and no more. A shot rolls over and over between the blade and the stone and, as the point of contact is very small, the pressure there concentrated crushes the hardest stone to splinters of appreciable size. Shot of different sizes should be worked together, as the largest tend to escape from under the blade first, then the next in size, and so on, leaving some under the blade to the end of the cut.

The durability of the shot is amazing. Under a ring drill steel shot is employed in boring of all sorts in quarrying, etc. In sinking the foundations of the Hudson Terminal in New York cores six to eight inches in diameter were thus taken out more economically than was feasible by any other method. This hard shot is also taking the place of sand and emery in grinding and polishing stones, finishing a job more rapidly than formerly. No special machinery is required and only the simplest of tools. A strip of sheet iron notched along its edge like a saw, with teeth half an inch high and two inches apart, will eat its way through a stone by aid of the shot at a rapid pace.

MILK AND EGGS AS A DIET

For Those Who Dislike Them There Are Many Ways by Which They May Be Made Palatable.

The use of milk and eggs as a diet or an aid in building up a patient is often a trial for the nurse. Many patients will take milk slightly warm, or even hot, and digest it readily, when cold milk causes distress. It is an excellent plan to rinse the mouth with cold, cool or hot water, as preferred, before and after drinking milk. The taste left in the mouth of many persons after a drink of milk, especially a small quantity, often causes the patient to dislike it. The secret of success in giving milk and eggs to those who would rather not take them is to prepare them in different ways. For a delicate stomach the white of an egg, well beaten, added to hot or cold milk, sweetened to taste, will often prove tempting, when even the sight of the yolk with milk is unpleasant.
At a time a little of the yolk may be used, the white of the egg being added last, and not stirred into the milk, but left on top of the glass for ornament.

wiches every morning for the last ten days!"

1—Remains of One of the Spanish Forts at Porto Bello. 2—Native Village on Taboga Island.

"Down verdure-clad slopes and terracing reaches Where orange and mango and pineapple grow. One wanders through Eden to ocean-washed beaches— An Eden that only the sun-children know."

Thus James S. Gilbert, the late lamented poet of Panama, wrote of Taboga Island. It was so enticing that I determined to be one of the sun-children for a day or two and so steamed away in the little launch twelve miles out into the Pacific to that beauty spot. It is all that Mr. Gilbert called it, and more, and it is no wonder that the sanitarium, established there by the French canal company and reopened by the Americans, is so well patronized. If you are a canal employee—white—and have been ill, the doctor may be kind enough to send you over to Taboga for two weeks to recuperate. If you are a mere visitor you can put up at the unpretentious little hotel conducted by William Jones, the American six-footer who looks like a miner and dances like a cotillon leader. In either case you will be fortunate, for you will find those "verdure-clad slopes" gorgeous with flowers and alive with brilliant birds, and the "ocean-washed beaches," the finest places in the world for a swim. You can sail about the pretty bays with the native fishermen, or you can climb up the hills where the boys are vociferously driving the kine home to be milked, or you can merely lie in the shade and dream dreams of the Spanish galleons and the buccaneers. A more delightful place for rest and the repair of shattered nerves would be hard to find.

Taboga has a history, too, small as it is. De Luque, the second bishop of Panama, looked upon the island, saw that it was good and established there his country residence. In fact he maintained a household there the year round, for, like many another churchman of the old days, he did not adhere closely to the rule of celibacy. His memory is preserved by a bathing place in a stream that runs down the mountain side, called the Bishop's Pool. It was reserved for the use of him and his retinue. Above it is the Family Pool, for women and children, and still higher up is the Pool of the Letters, for the men. The last one derives its name from the inscription "J. F. B. Ohio" carved on a nearby rock. This is a reminder that in 1852 the Fourth Infantry, U. S. A., crossed the isthmus en route for garrison duty in California, having sailed from New York on the United States mail steamer Ohio. Cholera was prevalent at the time in Panama and the American soldiers and the sailors from the Ohio were attacked by the disease, about eighty of them dying. Some of the sick were left on Taboga Island to recover, and evidently one of them did recover sufficiently to climb up to the bathing pool and leave the record that is a mystery to the native inhabitants of this day. Incidentally U. S. Grant, then a captain, was with the Fourth Infantry on that trip.

If you climb up the hill, following this stream most of the way, you will come to a place at the summit of a pass called Las Cruces. There, set in cement, are three small crosses commemorating the most exciting incident in the island's history. According to a Spanish work written early in the last century, a shipload of Peruvian pirates came sailing up the coast in 1815 and decided Taboga was a good place to loot. They landed and drove the small Spanish garrison out of the village and up the mountain. But in the pass the soldiers rallied, the inhabitants came to their assistance and there, says the chronicler, a most bloody combat raged for hours. Finally the pirates were routed and fled to their ship, leaving three men dead on the field of battle!

The isthmus reeks with history, some of the most interesting passages of which have to do with Porto Bello. But the visitor who goes there with mind full of the mighty fights and great trade of the old Spanish days will be woefully disappointed by the town as it now is. Romance, commerce, everything attractive has fled long ago from that place and Porto Bello is nothing but a dirty, immoral little village, full of low cantinas, slatternly natives and mangy curs. At each side of the town is the ruin of a Spanish fort, its picturesqueness marred by fishermen's nets and the local washing hung up to dry.

Thus the work of man has decayed, but Nature is as kind as ever to Porto Bello. Its bottle-shaped harbor is one of the prettiest to be found, with promontories guarding the entrance, beautiful hills on both sides and entrancing little rivers meandering down from the mountains and through the jungle into its upper end. One hill opposite the town boasts the remains of three unusually interesting Spanish forts. One is at the water's edge, another several hundred yards up the slope, and these two were once connected by a covered stone stairway the ruins of which still provide the easiest means of ascending. On the summit of the hill is the third fort, a mighty square tower surrounded by a deep moat. The walls are almost intact but the roof has fallen in and the fortress is full of trees and shrubbery.

With these three forts, two others protecting the harbor entrance, the two at the ends of the town and another just above it, Porto Bello might well seem to have been impregnable, yet it was taken twice by the English. Sir Francis Drake planned to capture it in 1596, but just as his ships were about to begin the attack Drake died and was buried in the mouth of the harbor. Dispirited by the loss of their leader, the English sailed away, but Capt. William Parker took up the project in 1602. With two ships he got past the first forts at night and after a desperate fight captured and sacked the city, carrying off 10,000 ducts' worth of plunder.

The second taking of Porto Bello was the first notable exploit of Henry Morgan, the famous buccaneer, as an independent commander of a fleet. Sailing into what is now Colon harbor, he took his men up a river in canoes, landed at a place called Estera Longa Lemos and marching through the jungle, attacked the city from the rear. First capturing the castle above the town, he shut the garrison in one room and blew them and the fort to pieces with gunpowder. The governor, the citizens and the rest of the soldiers, surprised and terror-stricken, were soon driven into one of the other forts and for hours they bravely withstood the assaults of the buccaneers until, as Esquemeling tells us, Captain Morgan began to despair of the whole success of the enterprise. Finally he had a number of ladders made and forced the priests and nuns whom he had captured to set them up against the walls. Many of these poor creatures were killed by the defenders, but at last the ladders were placed and the buccaneers swarmed up them carrying fireballs and pots of powder which they kindled and hurled among the Spaniards. The garrison surrendered at discretion, but the gallant governor defended himself so obstinately that the English were forced to kill him. Morgan remained in Porto Bello several weeks, plundering the place and torturing the citizens to induce them to reveal the hiding places of their riches.

Though an important place in the transshipment of gold from the west coast of South America, Porto Bello never was a large town, but for several weeks each year it was very populous. This was at the time of the annual fair, when the galleons from Spain were in the harbor waiting for the mule trains to bring the gold from Panama. Then merchants and adventurers from all that part of the world gathered in the village and trade was brisk in the big building now called the custom house, whose ruined walls still are standing. Merchandising, drinking and fighting merged the time until the galleons set sail for Spain with their golden cargoes.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedial treatment of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nice cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

UMBRELLA UNDER HIS FEET

Even That Plan Didn't Keep Cleveland Man From Losing the Article.

Attorney W. H. Boyd can lose more umbrellas than any man in Cleveland. Time after time he blossoms forth, equipped with a highly ornate and exceedingly expensive umbrella, and by the time evening comes there is nothing left but a disgusted look.

One rainy day recently Boyd appeared at a downtown cafe for his luncheon and sat at a table with James A. Newkirk, County Commissioner Elrick and Martin Thumm.

Boyd was desperately clutching a new umbrella.

"This doesn't belong to me," he announced. "I borrowed it and I don't intend to lose it."

"Tie it to the table leg," Thumm suggested.

"Get the waiter to hold it for you," Elrick volunteered.

"Have 'em put it in the safe," Newkirk advised.

Boyd ignored them all. He placed the umbrella on the floor and planted both feet firmly upon it, to the hilarious delight of his friends. Then, when he finished his luncheon, he walked away and left it.—Cleveland News.

"PEDLAR'S ACRE" IN LONDON

Was Given to St. Mary's Parish by Mysterious Individual of Fifteenth Century.

Belvedere road in London is built over the "Pedlar's Acre," which not long ago figured in the law courts. In St. Mary's, Lambeth, this mysterious pedlar, a fifteenth century worthy, has his memorial window. For it was a condition of his bequest of land to the parish that it should always be so. "Pedlar's Acre" in 1500 was valued at 2s 8d; what, allowing for the changed values of money, is its worth today? Here, in his "Walks," tells us that in 1884 the pedlar's memorial, "this single interesting and important possession of the church, was removed by the church wardens to make room for a window of trashy modern glass!" But the pedlar came into his own again ere a decade had passed.

CENTENARIANS ARE NOT FEW

More Than Seven Thousand of Them in Europe at the Latest Count.

Statistics gathered by the painstaking Germans say that there were in Europe, at the last count, more than seven thousand persons over a century old. The richer the country, apparently, the fewer persons attain extreme old age. Bulgaria heads the list with 3,888 centenarians, with its neighbors, Roumania and Serbia, next with 1,704 and 573, Spain has 410 and France 213; no other country had more than 200; England had only 92, and the three Scandinavian states were at the bottom of the list, Denmark having only two. Evidently the Balkans, scene of almost constant war for the last century, is the most likely place in which to attain old age.

TWO FAILURES

By FREDERICK FENN.

The man who said marriage was a habit was probably right, and herein lies the reason why the percentage of marriages among widows is so high. Once you have been accustomed to the companionship of the opposite sex it is difficult to do without it.

No one expected that Geoffrey Hamilton would marry again when Agatha died; but he did, and this is how it came to pass, and the sequel.

For fifteen years the Hamiltons were almost ideally happy, and then the subtle element of jealousy crept into their relations. It was not that he flirted, but with growth of popularity—he was a novelist of some note—he attracted attention, and many women found him interesting.

The little rift of suspicion once started developed amazingly quickly, until mutual relations became impossible. Agatha, being miserable, was constitutionally unable to refrain from making Geoffrey equally miserable, and then he became doubly so because a constant succession of scenes entirely prevented him doing any good work.

As a consequence he took to finding relief outside his home.

Before long matters reached a stage in which Agatha was never happy unless making herself miserable, if the paradox may be excused, by searching through her husband's papers and documents in the hope of finding proofs of his perfidy.

She succeeded in making the pair of them unutterably miserable, and then Hamilton took the matter into his own hands and decided that something must be done.

There were no grounds for a divorce, so that most disastrous of all matrimonial arrangements, separation, was decided upon. In this case neither party did form any new attachment. Strange as it may seem, at the back of all their bickerings they still cared for one another deeply, and Agatha never ceased to cry for the man who for fifteen years had been all in all to her, while, though Geoffrey found peace and a new energy for work, always, at the back of his mind, was a gnawing anxiety as to what was happening to the woman who once meant so much to him.

So matters drifted on until Agatha died—lonely, miserable, heart-broken—and her husband never really got over it, as the sequel shows.

That was Hamilton's first marriage, and you might have thought that he would not have been in a very great hurry to make another experiment, but, as a matter of fact, it was only a very short time before he was tied up once more, and how this came about was curious.

The thought of marrying again had not occurred to him, but he was in that unstrung, nervous state when any clever woman with a knowledge of human weakness can upset a man's moral balance, and the woman who did this was Evelyn Richards.

She was a widow, and a slight acquaintance of some years' standing, but not a woman with whom Hamilton had ever been on terms of the slightest intimacy.

A chance meeting, though, one day afforded him some pleasure, for she was undeniably attractive, and the sequel to this meeting was an arrangement to go to a theater the following evening. They went and Hamilton found rest and forgetfulness.

After the piece they adjourned to her flat for supper and afterward sat for an hour smoking and talking of purely ordinary things.

Then, how it happened the man never quite knew, but suddenly the woman rose from where she was sitting, and, coming over to him as he stood by the fire preparatory to taking his leave, put her hands on his shoulders and kissed him. Before he quite knew what he was doing he had taken her in his arms and kissed her back.

"Are you angry with me for that?" she said. "I don't know what prompted me, but I felt I must."

"No," said Hamilton; "I like you for it."

And thenceforward, though never word of love had passed before between those two, they suddenly saw each other in an entirely new aspect. All barriers went by the board and a marriage was speedily arranged.

To begin with, it was quite satisfactory and happy. Evelyn was affectionate and not exacting. She quite honestly cared for the man she had thrown over all her reserves to win.

What she did not and could not know was how deeply graven into his being was that first marriage. Agatha was the rock on which their short-lived happiness foundered, for, strangely enough, the more contented with his present lot Geoffrey Hamilton became, the more her reproaches from the grave stung into him.

Just as in the first marriage trouble ensued through slight misunderstandings, so here difficulties began through imperceptible shadows. There was never a quarrel, never a word of disagreement. But for the dead Agatha this couple would have been ideally happy.

As it was, they drifted farther and farther apart, and the dead hand separated them. You may say he was weak, and condemn him as you will, but only those who have felt the past rise up and hit them in the face with recurring virulence will understand the depth of the tragedy. There are certain things stronger than ourselves.

It was after dinner one night that Hamilton nerved himself to the idea of parting, and this time it was Evelyn who stood by the fire, looking into it with a vague wondering.

Geoffrey came over to her and, lifting her face in both hands, kissed her very tenderly. There was silence for a moment and then the woman spoke.

"I made a mistake," she said. "I thought that even if you did not care for me then, I could make you care—a little."

"I do care, and that's the trouble."

"Why? What else matters?"

"You know my story?"

"Yes"—she smiled rather mirthlessly—"and I thought that together we might write over the past—two parts, for mine was not very happy, and honestly, quite honestly, I cared for you, or, believe me, I should not have acted as I did."

"I know," he said. "I honor you for it, and I love you for it. The pity is that through no fault of yours or of mine the whole sorry business has come to grief."

"I have felt it would for a long time."

"Do you know what a palimpsest is?"

"No."

"An old scroll on which a record has been written, a record that cannot be obliterated. Then later, when that record was no longer wanted, and when scrolls were valuable as human lives, the old writing was, so to speak, whitewashed over, and a new story written; but underneath the old story remained, unobliterated, crying for a stroke of the sponge to bring it to light. That's the trouble with me. I love the new record, but the old writing insists."

The woman subsided into a chair by the fire and began to cry quietly.

"I could kill myself," Geoffrey continued; "perhaps that's what I ought to have done, but all this is stronger than myself. I don't ask you to forgive me. I only ask you to be a little sorry."

"I'm sorry for you—I'm sorry for myself."

He bent over and kissed her.

"Never believe that I don't love you, because I do. But we've got to part. I'm more grieved than I can tell you for you, but be a little sorry for me sometimes, when you think of me, a wanderer—lonely—gripped by a dead hand and longing for human sympathy. That's my position. God pity us both!"

There was a sob in her throat as she spoke. "But I do understand, dear. Don't think I don't understand. I do, because I love you—because of what I have been through."

"I wish I could set you free," he said.

"I don't want to be set free," she said bravely. "Some time—who knows—my hold may strengthen, hers may loosen, but I can't keep you now. My strongest hold on you is letting you go. O, I know that, though some women might not. Kiss me and tell me you don't think the worse of me for taking you as I did."

"I love you for it, though I've only made you unhappy."

"You haven't," she said through her tears; "but, O, it's hard to let you go."

"It's hard to go."

"There'll be no other—?" and she faltered.

"Good God!" he muttered. "How could there be?"

"I know—I know—"

And so they parted. And so ended Hamilton's second marriage.

SECRET THAT CAMEL HOLDS

Alone of All Living Things That Animals Knows the One Hundredth Name of Allah.

The 999 windows of the mosque of Sultan Selim remind one of the 99 names of Allah. These 99 names, the Arabs say, are written in the palms of the hands of all true believers. The explanation is interesting, and even an unbeliever can test it.

The Arabic numeral eight is written like an inverted V of the English alphabet. By holding up your left hand, with the thumb and fingers bent slightly inward, the lines of the palms will be seen to take the form of a rough A1, which makes the Arabic figures 81. Placing the right hand under the left in the same way makes the figures 18 (1M). The total is 99.

There ought really to be 100, but the hundredth is lost to every creature but one.

Why does the camel wear such a supercilious expression? The heavy, pendulous under lip and the snarling curl of the upper giving an expression of sneering contempt which can hardly be equaled in the brute creation.

No wonder. The camel alone knows the hundredth name of Allah, and he won't tell it.

NEW IDEA IN MUSICAL ART

Will Be Steam Hammer Rhapsody, According to Luigi Russolo, the Italian Painter.

In the latest Futurist manifesto—the number of these documents is now uncountable—Luigi Russolo, the painter, outlines a form of musical art as novel as it is striking.

This is the era of machinery, and machines are noisy, he says in effect, therefore the art of the future must be the art of noise. Russolo admits that he is no musician himself, but throws out these hints for the benefit of "advanced" musicians.

If anyone has the temerity to embody Signor Russolo's ideas, the most ultra-modern orchestration yet known will appear in comparison as a plaintive little wail. "With the incessant multiplication of new machines," he writes, "we shall one day be able to distinguish ten, twenty or thirty thousand different noises. It is these noises which we must not simply imitate, but combine at the dictates of our artistic fantasy." One imagines a steam-hammer rhapsody or a dynamo sonata.

SCOTLAND.

Prior to the year 258, which witnessed its invasion by the Scoti, a tribe who inhabited the northern portions of the country now known as Ireland, Scotland bore the name of Caledonia, literally the hilly country of the Caeli, or Gaels. The word cael, or gael, is a corruption of Gadhel, signifying in the native tongue "a hidden rover," while Scot, derived from the native scute, means practically the same thing—i. e., a wanderer. The Caledonians were the inhabitants of the highlands, the prefix dun expressing the Celtic for hill, fort, stronghold, etc. The Scots were the invaders from Scotia, who appropriated the Hebrides and western islands, whereas the lowlanders were the Pictos, so called from their description by the Romans, picti, painted men.—From "Names and Their Meaning."

Dumb Chills And Fever.

Douglasville, Tex.—"Five years ago I was caught in the rain at the wrong time," writes Miss Edna Rutherford, of Douglasville, "and from that time was taken with dumb chills and fevers, and suffered more than I can tell. I tried everything that I thought would help, and had four different doctors, but got no relief, so I began to take Cardui. Now I feel better than in many months." Cardui does one thing, and does it well. That's the secret of its 50 years of success. As a tonic there is nothing in the drug store like it. As a remedy for women's ills it has no equal. Try it. TOBACCO.

There is a great shortage in the acreage of tobacco in the black patch this year and there is no reason for believing that there can be a slump in prices when the market opens up next season. Of course, if the acreage is several thousand short of last year the product will be correspondingly so. Authorities insist that there is much of the 1912 crop unsold on account of the prices not being satisfactory to the growers.

The acreage in Kentucky in 1912 was 358,060. This year it is 345,216 acres, a shortage of 12,844 acres. It is estimated that the product this year will be 310,693,000 pounds. Last year the product amounted to 348,606,000 lbs., a shortage of 37,913,000 lbs.

The State Agricultural Commissioner's report for June placed the acreage of dark tobacco at 64 per cent, the condition a little above 75 per cent. In Christian county, from what the farmers say, the growing crop is in fine condition, and though the acreage is under the average, the quality bids fair to be exceptionally good.

The Hopkinsville loose market is getting to be quite dull, one loose floor house reporting very little doing, but prices remaining firm. The sales, however, exceeded those of last week 18,395 lbs. Receipts still continue, occasionally a few loads from different sections coming in. Prices may be quoted as firm, with an upward tendency.

The hoghead market was short 50 per cent. in receipts over the week before, while the sales were under 50 per cent. for the same period.

Below is Inspector Abernathy's weekly report for week ending July 19, 1913:

Receipts for week..... 47 Hhds.

Sales for week..... 47 Hhds.

The World long since established a record for impartiality, and anybody can afford its Thrice-a-Week edition, which comes every other day in the week, except Sunday. It will be of particular value to you now. FOLLOW OUTLINE OF HOUSES

Authority on Woman's Dress Puts Forward an Idea Concerning the Hat Dear to Femininity.

Did it ever occur to you that head-gear takes on the form of houses? It is hard to account for some of the weird hats of the day by this theory, although perhaps an effort to carry out the lines of the skyscraper may be traced in the beanstalk decorations of feathers and flowers which tower skyward from our hats.

However hard to prove, this is a theory put forward by an authority on woman's dress. To understand its claim to consideration call up a picture of a medieval woman with a tall funnel-shaped headdress—the henin. Isn't it for all the world like the spire of a Gothic church? And doesn't it also suggest the peak tent where her crusading or warrior husband or brother or father spent much of his time?

Take the eastern turban for another example. It is almost like the dome of some mosque or synagogue in outline.

Another eastern example is the Chinese coolie. When he is wearing his rainy day straw hat he looks as if he had veritably donned the roof of his own straw-thatched hut.

Dome and pagoda parasols, which properly may be classed as head coverings, are evidently not alone in borrowing their outlines from buildings.

WHAT NOVEL READERS LIKE

Great Authorities Have Differed on the Subject, and the Matter Still Is Under Discussion.

That old question whether the poor prefer to read stories about themselves rather than about the rich has been revived in England and discussed by serial writers. Some believe that most readers, whether poor or rich, prefer novels dealing with a class different from their own, and some maintain that the majority of readers are more interested in their own class. Nobody knows. But something undoubtedly depends upon the novelist himself. Dickens had no difficulty in interesting everybody in the poor. Thackeray made the well-to-do and the rich interesting. So does Howells. So does Mrs. Wharton. And innumerable others.

On the other hand, Jack London, Kauffman, James Oppenheim, and possibly two or three others have sketched wonderful pictures of lowly and obscure lives. The "great American novel," which may have been written, but is still awaiting publication, will deal neither with the rich nor the poor exclusively, nor with the middle class, but with all sorts and conditions of men. It will be a novel of democracy—neither aristocratic nor proletarian.

FOR YOUR COMPLEXION.

Now comes a New York scientist and strikes a blow at the arsenic and cold creams businesses by telling us that to have a perfectly lovely complexion and white skins we must eat plenty of salt, even if we turn ourselves into walking reservoirs afterward by drinking deluges of water. And only a while ago Mary Walker or somebody else told us to eat onions for the same purposes. Still, come to think of it, we can put the salt on the onion and so follow both counselors, can't we?

A Russian army surgeon has invented a process for preserving fresh meats, which consists of dipping carcasses in a solution of acetic acid, then in a solution of common salt in glycerin, the two forming a thin, elastic, dry crust.

FOUND TIME FOR KINDLY ACT

British Statesman, in High Office, Made Glad the Heart of School-girl Who Asked Advice.

Viscount Haldane, the British lord chancellor, who is to visit Canada this summer, is not only a great legal luminary, profound theologian, and authority on German literature, but one of the most approachable of men as well. In this connection a German gentleman resident in London tells a delightful story.

"My daughter," he says, "attends a school in Hampstead. Her mistress gave her an English translation of a sentence from Goethe as the title for an essay. 'That's not in Goethe,' I said, when she quoted the words to me. 'It must be, father, or Miss ——— would never have said so.' 'Well, you ask the lord chancellor,' I said in jest; 'he knows Goethe by heart.'"

"The girl took the jest for earnest, and sent a note to the lord chancellor. By return of post came a letter from the house of lords, in which Lord Haldane presented his compliments and referred the young lady to a passage in Carlyle, where the words from Goethe might be found translated as the mistress had set them. The letter is now framed in the girl's bedroom. It was a charming act," adds her father. "I could not imagine a German chancellor deigning to answer a schoolgirl's letter."

AIRSHIP AS BATTLE FACTOR

Still Very Much of an Unknown Quantity—Much Opposition to Aerial Fleets Has Developed.

The successful operation of a machine gun mounted on the upper deck of a Zeppelin airship induces speculation as to the future of aircraft in warfare. It does not appear probable that the experiment at Friedrichshafen, Germany, have demonstrated the aerial battleships are practical. In fact, the imperfections in the construction and operation of airships are important limitations to their effective use in offensive and defensive warfare. However, the experiments revealed a portentous trend in the development of aviation. Whether the day when the fearful aerial battles of fiction will be possible is near or distant, Germany and other countries are trying to hasten that time.

Possibility of the transfer of the carnage of battle to the air has aroused opposition to the equipment of aerial fleets. To some extent this opposition is organized. It found expression at the last peace congress at Geneva, Switzerland. The delegates from the various countries favored a convention of the powers to eliminate the use of air craft in actual offensive and defensive tactics. While the congress, of course, is opposed to war, yet the use of airships for scouting and reconnoitering service was not so abhorred.

WHY HE ENJOYED IT.

Sam Bernard, the comedian, was walking down Broadway when a huge crowd attracted his attention. He joined the crowd, to find that it was watching a handful of laborers who were digging a hole in the street.

"Odd, ain't it," said the manager, "how little it takes to gather a New York crowd? Here we are, a couple of hundred of us, breathlessly watching a few men shovel dirt. By the way," the manager added, "that chummy chap in the pink shirt seems to enjoy his job. Look at the showy way he flourishes his shovel."

"Why," said Mr. Bernard, "that's Platt, an ex-actor. You see, he never played to such a large and appreciative audience before."

IT'S ON VIEW.

"Have you seen Mamie's engagement ring?"
"Of course. Did you have an idea that she was making an effort to hide it?"

FASHION'S LATEST FREAK.

"Have you anything to say about the three-story skirt?"
"Nothing I'd care to have printed."

LITERARY GREATNESS.

"Is he a great writer?"
"Great? Some day they'll be forming cults that pretend to understand him."

HIS NATURE.

"That actor hogs the whole show."
"Quite natural, isn't it, for a ham?"

BUY FAKE "WORKS OF ART" Millionaire Collectors Gather Much Stuff That Has No Real Value to the Owner.

"A fake Raphael costing half a million marked J. Pierpont Morgan's debut into the collecting field," said, with an evil laugh, an art dealer.

"Morgan once showed with great pride a miniature of Mary, Queen of Scots, in the full bloom of her womanly beauty.

"A Holbein," he said, in his gruff, stern way. "A Holbein masterpiece."

"How strange that is!" said I.
'And Holbein died before Mary,
of Scots, was a year old, too!'

"I had a Botticelli that I wanted to sell Morgan. But it was a dubious Botticelli. So Morgan shook his head over it and said:

"My collection contains only masterpieces, and every one of these masterpieces is authenticated."

"But," said I, "there's one fake in your collection—a fake Benvenuto Cellini."

"How do you know it's a fake?"
said Mr. Morgan contemptuously.

"Because I sold it to you myself," said I.

"These millionaires are like children in our hands when they begin to collect objects of art. Why, a Fifth avenue trust magnate showed me a superb silver teapot the other day and said:

"This belonged to William the Conqueror."

"Ha, ha, ha!" I roared. "Don't you know, sir, that they didn't begin to brew tea in England till centuries after William the Conqueror was dead and buried?"

"No, he didn't know it, and he put the teapot away with an angry frown. I think he'd have contradicted me if he'd dared.

"When I am escorted through these millionaires' galleries I always think of John Sloan's remark about Corot.

"The indefatigable Corot," said Sloan, regarding me gravely through his black-rimmed pince-nez, "painted during his long and laborious life 5,000 masterpieces, of which no less than 72,000 are still extant."

"Why the cogitation?"
"I dislike to take my engagement

like to know what it cost. But it would embarrass me to take it to a

AS EMPEROR HAD PREDICTED
Course of History Bore Out Presentment Which Had Afflicted the Great Napoleon.

Napoleon the Great was exceedingly superstitious. The following is told as one of the illustrations of this: When Napoleon, in the spring of 1799, was lying before Acre, he was anxious for news from upper Egypt, whither he had despatched Mameluke leader. Not many days after a courier arrived with dispatches, favorable in the main, but reporting one tragical occurrence on a small scale that to Napoleon outweighed the public prosperity. The commander, as a brave man, felt that any fate that awaited him would be better than to fall into the hands of the enemy. He set fire to the powder magazine. The vessel blew up and the crew perished. For all this Napoleon cared little; but one solitary fact there was in the report which struck him with secret alarm;
this ill-fated boat was called L'Italie, and in the name of the vessel Napoleon read an augury of the fate which had befallen the Italian territory. He felt certain that Italy was lost and Napoleon was inconsolable.
But what possible connection, it was asked, can exist between this vessel on the Nile and a remote peninsula of southern Europe? "No matter," replied Napoleon, "my presentiments never deceive me. You will see that all is ruined. I am satisfied that my Italy, my conquest, is lost to France." So, indeed, it was.

RIDDING CHEESE OF MITES

High-Frequency Currents of Electricity Are Employed for the Purpose
by French Scientist.

Not satisfied with ripening peaches by electricity, a French scientist has hit upon the plan of ridding cheese of mites by the application of powerful high-frequency currents.

He has invented a brush with fine silver bristles. The brush is connected with a powerful high-frequency apparatus and then is passed slowly over the surface of the cheese. The surface is bathed in heatless sparks and the organisms are instantly electrocuted. This scientific expert also has had remarkable success in ripening cheese by electricity.

American ingenuity, however, has overshadowed this Frenchman. We are told the most successful raisers of broilers for the city markets have discovered that electricity is an indispensable aid in promoting the growth of chickens. Since the chicken does its feeding exclusively in the daytime, electric lights in the brood-ers play a trick upon the unsuspecting fowl and makes him a glutton.
He eats all the food he requires in eight hours and utilizes another eight hours to digest it. Thus the chicks live three electric days in two ordinary days and consequently reaches the markets weeks ahead of their country cousins.

GOOD RETORT.

An army officer, noted for his bluntness of speech, rudely remarked in the presence of a clergyman. "If I had a son who was an idiot I would make him a parson."

"Evidently your father held a different view, sir," responded the cler-gyman quietly.

STARTING EARLY.

"It was a notable wedding."

"Did the mother of the bride weep?"

"No. She was too busy glaring at the mother of the bridegroom."

APPROPRIATE.

"How can you introduce any dancing numbers in what is a racing drama?"

"Couldn't you have a pony ballet?"

COLOR DISTINCTIONS.

"When is a woman a blue-stocking?"

"Strange to say, when she is well read."

ON THE TROLLEY.

"They say there is always room at the top."

"Not always. Sometimes you can't even get a strap."

PARADOX.

"The man who lendeth money—"

"Yes."
"Borroweth trouble."

WEIRD AND WONDERFUL WAIL

Bray of the Chinese Donkey Put on Record as Unlike Anything Else on the Earth.

In all the east today the donkey is a favorite means of transportation, both for travelers and merchandise. It was so in the days of the patriarchs Isaac and Jacob, says the Louisville Courier Journal, and so it will probably remain for ages to come.

But nothing in China is just like the same thing anywhere else in the world, and the donkey is no exception. Dr. Chester of Nashville, who while evangelizing in Arkansas in his younger days, had become familiar with the easy amble of the long-eared American species, was induced to make trial of the Chinese type during a visit to China a few years ago. His experience was disappointing. The gait was a rough, insufferable jog, and the characteristic bray was a painful phenomenon in the realm of sound. Dr. Chester reports his impressions as follows:

"The power of heredity, working through millenniums of isolation, with no modification from foreign admixture, has developed in the bray of the Chinese donkey a quality of its own. There are no words in English to describe the heart-rending pathos of it. It was as if an appeal to heaven against the cruelty and oppression of ages were at last finding utterance in one long, loud, undulating wail. And when our party of three met another party of six, and all nine of the donkeys began at one time to exchange the compliments of the day, then pathos gave place to terror, and you could only sit appalled and trembling as the mighty reverberation rolled away on its journey around the world."—Youth's Companion.

"We had visitors in school today!" announced small Velma at the dinner table. "Teacher's brother and her fiancé."
"Fiance?" repeated father. "Are you sure it wasn't her beau?" he facetiously asked.
"Oh, no," stated Velma, "it was her fiancé."
"What's the difference between a beau and a fiancé?" queried father.
"Lots," quoth Velma. "A beau is only a fiancé in the pin-feather stage."
"My gracious!" exclaimed mother. "Where did the child learn that?"
Velma had a tremendous respect for matrimony, by the way. When she was six she had already determined her career—
"When I'm grown I'm going to be a musician, an artist and a mother."

MENACE TO BRITISH NATION

Fostering of the unfit is increasing the number of degenerates, says authority.

In the fostering of the unfit Prof. R. Cary Gilson sees the menace of the future of the British nation. Since 1875 there has been an extraordinary fall in the birth rate of the more efficient classes—including professional people and the best artisans and skilled mechanics—but with no falling off in the increase of the incompetent and degenerate, who are actually favored by both environment and legislation.

War on infant mortality and surgical aid have enabled defectives to become parents to an extent hitherto unparalleled. Even such well-intended acts as the prohibition of child labor, compulsory education and free breakfasts tax the capable for the benefit of the incompetent and idle and make harder the bringing up of the family of the industrious without discouraging the reproduction of those whose standard of parental obligations is extremely low.

To avert national ruin, economic factors must be intelligently readjusted so as to restore selection of the fit in place of disastrous selection of the unfit. The marrying of actual degenerates must be forbidden, and social legislation, philanthropic effort, regulation of industry and commerce and other undertakings should be considered in relation to their possible effect on the national breed.

Better than any millionaire's benefaction, it is concluded, would be a well administered endowment enabling sound and capable persons to marry early and bring up large families.

HIS GETTING OUT PLACE

Mrs. Kinder—It seems to me for a man who claims to deserve charity you have a very red nose.

Fine Offering at Rex Theatre Today—Leading Feature a Thriller.

In addition to other attractions, the principal feature of the bill offered at the Rex Theatre today is in itself sufficient to draw large houses. It is a love story of the war between the states and the plot is worked out with most consummate skill. The title of the play is "At Shiloh," and there is enough in it to please those who delight in military activity, close calls and the devotion of a Southern girl, to please all ages, Gens. Johnston, Beauregard, Grant and Sherman are all shown in the play. Phyllis Gordon, who takes the character of Virginia Carlton, is proclaimed a heroine and the whole play ends right.

Forbes Manuf'g Co.

Incorporated.

Bob Taylor Lives,

In the two bright and beautiful books just issued, "Lectures and Best Literary Productions," and "Life and Career" of Senator Robert Love Taylor, handsomely illustrated, you cannot hear again his voice or see the humorous curl of his lips, that convulsed a continent with laughter, but, within the covers of these volumes, are the pictures woven of his wondrous words, and, laughing through their sunny pages, are all of the inimitable stories which he told to the multitudes. In "Life and Career," pens of genius have traced his romantic life from its morning in "Happy Valley," through his young and rosy dreams through stress and storm, through cheering throngs, and on into the waiting shadows, loved and laurel crowned.

We expect to sell millions of these books. First edition going fast. Cloth, $2 the Volume, $4 the Set,

Half Morocco, $2.75 the Volume, $5 the Set, Full Morocco, $5.50 the Volume, $10 the Set. The people want them. A harvest for Agents. Liberal commissions. Address, Terry T. Martin, Gen. Mgr. of Ky. Care Box 6 Hopkinsville, Ky. Advertisement.
